STUDENT PRESENTATION ON THE THEME "TAGORE'S IDEA OF NATIONALISM AND ITS RELEVANCE IN PRESENT TIMES."

TAGORE'S UNDERSTANDING OF NATIONALISM AND ITS RELEVANCE IN INDIA

With every breath, with every pulsation of the heart and with every one of our movements, we consider ourselves as 'free' but at the very same moment we are shown that we are not by the society - we are captivated by our body, mind, thoughts and feelings as bondslaves. Our soul is just like a thread that runs through all these captivations, each one of which is, like a pearl as they provide us opportunities to understand the self. Nationalism, as a political and social concept emerged from these captivations when the tyrannical Britishers established their rule over India for two centuries. India's glorious history bears the scars of British colonialism and exploitation that our memory finds hard to erase. In the colonised India, people were denied to have rights, their fundamental rights - freedom, equality, right to form government, help in development. Their attempt to secure rights demanded a pile of cadavers and unbearable sufferings. On the other hand, the presence of Britishers did result in achieving unification and awakening national consciousness, some crucial developments such as transport.

Rabindranath Tagore, a great living idol, poet, philosopher, thinker and writer. He was also a passionate advocate of individual freedom and the voice of India. His comprehensive vision of cosmic unity gained awareness from the India's War of Independence in 1857 - 4 years before his birth, then by Non-Cooperation Movement, Civil Disobedience Movement and Quit India Movement.

After the struggle, India emerged out as a 'nation' - a group of people with common feelings, identity, capable enough to reproduce itself through education, ideologically bound to a literate culture and consisting of people flexible enough to shift occupations as demanded by the society. The sudden emergence of development required new compelling principles to sustain itself the overwhelming majority of humans. Although, different nations harmonise amongst themselves just as self-revolving planets in our Solar System,
